

Conscientisation is the process by where we teach people to recognise their true reality (which is unjust)

Co-conspirators are people who also want to remake the system. In this case that would be changing the education system

Conscientisation Duncan andue.
Ann Milne

Alicia Gozga → Co-conspiracy

* Self-direction → Students will need to develop self-efficacy in learning how to learn

* Use questioning → frequently and rigorously

* My understandings about teaching.

Fair, Free, equal?
Education equalised?
Treaty the same?

Most important readings?

~~Presented~~ Bronte Leslie
- Questioning Chris
- "Slow" movement Chris Daniel
- Summarise. Daniel Bronte
Chris - change my approach to the Daniel - More of myself the Bronte figure out what the teacher wants
Leslie always focused
- Learning
- Switched metaphor
dog, heart (human organ)

Questions we were asked about New Zealand. The last question should be: Do we treat everyone the same?

No, no, and no. But is it by design? I don't think so. I more think it's the blind spots of policy makers, leaders, and politicians. I truly believe these people want the best for everyone, but that systems are imperfect

These are my own conceptions of teaching. They contain inbuilt biases and relate to the privilege I had in the education system. They also contain some cultural biases about using questioning in the classroom (including of me, the teacher), which some cultures approach in a different way. This includes some Pacific cultures which value respect.